Loopy case wireless charging

Go to the main content featuring 1-4 of the 4 Hi replies. Belkin BOOST UP Wireless Charging Pad is compatible with most lightweight bodys (non-metal casings) up to 3 mm thick, so it should work with a looped body until it exceeds the recommended thickness. Belkin, International Manufacturer November 25, 2018 Do you think it's useful? | Report abuse This question is answered by: I use my Belkin charger to charge my iPhone 8 with a looped case. Sometimes it's hard to start a connection, but it charges quickly and stays in touch. Jeanette November 25, 2018 Do you find it useful? | Report abuse I'm not sure what the loop case is or whether it will work or not..... I can say that it works great with Otterbox Defender, which is two layers Randy November 25, 2018 0 out of 1 found it useful. What are you, | Report the abuse I just wanted to update this for anyone with the iPhone11 pro max, it doesn't work. I was skeptical how the connection of Qi seemed to be where the noose was on the case. If you find this to be the case with your phone (you could probably find this info online, but I just moved my oversized phone around on the charger to get an idea) this charger won't work with the case on. Apple's new iPhone 8 and X (and tons of Samsung models) have wireless charging capabilities. So, does this work with the Lupo case? Here's what we've experienced so far: the iPhone 8, 8 Plus, and X works remarkably well with this Belkin charger. Has a hard time keeping in touch with this Samsung charger, so we recommend avoiding it. Please click here to watch the video. In addition, it works well with both our original and MAX lineup! There is definitely a method associated with wireless charging with Loopy installed. Check out our video above or here for a technique on how to place Loopy on wireless chargers. Qi charging with Loopy is all about finding where to connect Qi on your device and centering it on the pad. In many cases, it's not directly in the center, so play with it to see when it connects. From there, you need to put downward pressure to squish the loop and initiate the charge. Keep it squished for a second or so and slowly let go. Once he finds the charge connects, he should stay in touch! We took our phones 100% charge using the technique in the video above, so it works!! :) We would recommend sticking with the Belkin charger mentioned above if you use wireless charging. If your current wireless charger isn't working, you're still in luck because Loopy is so easy to un/install! One of the key factors we've noticed is how big you like your cycle to be and how malleable it is. This is. Usually wear for a long time and get a comfort. To skip this hacking period, you can remove the loop and give it a few gentle tugs to loosen the flex. I (Jim) used my iPhone X on the Belkin charger without any problems until I turned off my case (and loop). I found that the loop was too tight, and after stretching my loop a little bit, it went back to work like a charm! Just be sure to use the technique in our videos! Finally, are you using a wireless charger with Loopy Case now? We conduct a survey to see which chargers work well for our customers. Please take a super short poll here. Stay Lupo! Jim Wangercyn, co-founder of LoopyCases.com Sep 16, 2006 2,853 2,197 Down south I use and love mine, and I'm just wondering if anyone is using one and, if so, whether you have an edge screen protector on your phone as well. I just ordered an edge protector to the edge because it bothers me that the glass protectors I use barely cover the actual screen. I'm a little concerned that with a full-back, my case might either not work, or nest up to quarterback. Ideas?? Loopy sells glass treads but nothing edges to the edge: I watched Aaron's YouTube review of the case and it looks like the lips are wrapping around pretty well. You may have trouble climbing. August 24, 2012 1,327 296 Paris I have and love my case Loopy . I use a screen protector, but its not edge to edge. I can't remember which brand though. November 12, 2017 65 103 Netherlands Thanks for sharing this on this forum. I live in the Netherlands but have never heard of fixated cases... After reading the positive reviews (on a looped site) I ordered one and I am very, very happy! I just love him. I use it on my iPhone 7 Plus. I ordered also the edge edge of the protector. Also very good. You can hardly see that there is a defender on the phone. The real problem is how to do it with wireless charging. If you have to pull out a group of every charge, then it will be worn out of the group, right? I CAN try it, we'll see. Never heard of it until I read the post on X cases so maybe. I use and love mine and I'm just wondering if anyone is using one and if so, then whether you have an edge-to-edge screen protector on your phone as well. I just ordered an edge protector to the edge because it bothers me that the glass protectors I use barely cover the actual screen. I'm a little concerned that with a full-back, my case might either not work, or nest up to quarterback. Ideas?? Had loopy all this year on my 7 plus. Loved. Surprisingly, it took a lot of drops without damage. I only got tired of the loops a couple of months ago and removed it so that the case would sit smoothly and go in and out of your pockets better. I am Just get that handle you can attach to any case rather than loops. It's only like $10 in best buy and will it be an alternative? Alternative? Just put it on the case to your liking, remove the case when you want to charge your phone wirelessly or just leave it to charge with lightning. I think you mean pop music. I prefer loops. Popsocet can still slip out of your hands while the loop remains on your finger. Reaction: AppleRobert Have you heard of the Loopy Affair? I've tried a lot of phone cases over the past decade and Loopy is by far my favorite! Here are all the reasons I love it (and if you want the Loopy Case coupon code, use everydayreading for 10% of your order!) in a very nasty series of events a few years ago, I smashed the phone screen twice in three weeks. I had a case and screen protector on it and everything and he did nothing to protect his phone when it fell to the ground. It wasn't the only time I cracked the phone screen - I've probably done it four or five times in the last nine years of iPhone ownership, but replacing it twice in such a short time period of $100 was memorably scary. About six months later, I got a Loopy deal as a gift that pleased me since I saw them all over Instagram and wanted to try them out myself. I admit that after a year of using it, I'm not necessarily convinced The Loopy Affair was the best thing ever. I mean, I liked it, but I wasn't sure it was really worth the hype. And then, I updated my phone last fall, and the idea of using this brand new (expensive!) phone without Loopy Case was incomprehensible to me. Another phone case? One with a pop outlet? It's not even tempting for me. I ordered a new Loopy Case and refused to use my brand new phone (or even take it out of the box) until it was safely tucked into the new loopy case. I think you could say that I became a casual Loopy Case believer. That's the thing about the Loopy Affair. If you have a finger in the noose on your back, it is almost impossible to give it up. I was carrying a small child, a stack of books, a purse and a snack, plus my phone and didn't worry BIT about dropping my phone because it's so safe. Another thing is that if you drop your phone, Loopy Case is so solid, it is still super protected, especially on those risky edges that would like to break down at any moment. I still dropped my phone many times in the last two years if it falls out of my wallet or my child picks it up or I have a stack of things that I nyasi and I haven't had a BIT problem with any cracks or dings or dents. And if you're looking for a Loopy Case coupon code, you can everydayreading for a 10% discount. I think you'll love it as much as I do! Any other questions in the Lupo case?
